M 11 Act it out! – Perpetrator and victim

Do three exercises to prepare for violent situations.

Statues

Work in pairs. One of you is the perpetrator<sup>1</sup>, the other is the victim. Stand facing each other. Close your eyes. The perpetrator assumes a threatening pose that shows "I'm powerful. I'm going to beat you up." The victim assumes a pose that shows "I'm scared of you."

Open your eyes at the same time. Look at each other for 20 seconds. Then talk about how you felt in your roles. Did you feel even more powerful/scared because of the pose of the other person?

Swap roles and partners.

1 perpetrator: der/die Täter(in)

Stop right there!

Work in pairs. Again one of you is the perpetrator<sup>1</sup>, the other is the victim. Stand about 10 metres away from each other. The perpetrator walks towards the victim in a threatening way. As soon as the victim begins to feel uneasy, they say "stop" loud and clearly.

Variation A: The perpetrator stops immediately.

Variation B: The perpetrator stops only after the second time that the victim says "stop".

Variation C: The perpetrator stops only when they get the feeling that it would be better to stop now. The victim may have to say "stop" many times and in a very loud and firm<sup>3</sup> voice before the perpetrator stops.

Act out all three variations. Then swap roles and partners.

1 perpetrator: der/die Täter(in) – 2 uneasy: unbehaglich – 3 firm: fest

A violent situation

Invent a short role play about teen violence. It could be a situation in a public place, at school, in a dating relationship or anything else you can think of. It might even be a situation that one of you has been in. There could be several roles, e.g. victim, perpetrator and bystanders<sup>2</sup>.

© Thinkstock

First, act it out in a way that the perpetrator is successful. In the next round(s), the perpetrator tries to act the same way. But the others act differently. Maybe the victim reacts earlier? Maybe bystanders become helpers?

Afterwards talk about what happened, how and why.

1 perpetrator: der/die Täter(in) – 2 bystander: der/die Zuschauer(in)

Kompetenzen

- Hör- und Lesetexten Informationen entnehmen
- einen Standpunkt in einer Diskussion vertreten und einen Perspektivwechsel vornehmen
- mit Gewalt konstruktiv umgehen

Niveau

Klasse 9

Dauer

4 Schulstunden (+ LEK)

Einbettung

Die Einheit kann unabhängig vom Lehrwerk eingesetzt werden. Inhaltlich bietet sich eine Anknüpfung an „Teen world – teens in trouble“ an. Alle vier Unterrichtsstunden können als Einzelstunde unterrichtet werden.

Hinweise

Die Amokläufe von Winnenden (2009) und Erfurt (2002), der gewaltsame Tod der Studentin Tuğçe Albayrak (2014), die Krawalle in Großbritannien im Sommer 2011 – diese und ähnliche Ereignisse machen das Thema „Jugendgewalt“ in den Medien leider immer wieder präsent. Möglicherweise haben Ihre Schülerinnen und Schüler<sup>1</sup> schon Erfahrungen mit Gewalt gemacht oder fühlen sich davon bedroht. In dieser Einheit informieren sie sich in Hör- und Lesetexten über verschiedene Aspekte des Themas und diskutieren über unterschiedliche Formen von Jugendgewalt und ein mögliches Strafmaß. In Rollenspielen erarbeiten sie Strategien zur Deeskalation von Gewalt.

Zur Durchführung*1. Stunde: Types of violence – reading and talking about texts

Einstieg: Die Bildimpulse (M 1) werden auf Folie kopiert aufgelegt oder über den Beamer gezeigt (beiliegende CD 14). Die Schüler stellen im Plenum Vermutungen über die dargestellten Situationen an (task 1) und berichten über eigene Erfahrungen mit Jugendgewalt (task 2). Die Lehrkraft notiert für das Thema wichtige (bereits bekannte und neue) Vokabeln an der Tafel (to kick sb., to beat up sb., to get attacked by sb., to protect sb., tribute, to commemorate, school shooting).

Zu zweit lesen die Schüler jeweils einen der Texte A–C (M 2–M 4) über unterschiedliche Formen von Jugendgewalt und beantworten Fragen dazu (M 5).

Differenzierung: Die Texte B und C sind anspruchsvoller als Text A. Sie können daher an Lesestärke-Lerner verteilt werden.

In einer Art kurzem Gruppenpuzzle finden sich nun immer drei Schüler zusammen, die unterschiedliche Texte gelesen haben. Sie informieren die anderen Gruppenmitglieder über ihren Text und diskutieren die letzte(n) Frage(n) auf M 5. Die Ergebnisse werden im Plenum besprochen.

Auf der beiliegenden CD 14 steht ein Arbeitsblatt zur Verfügung, mit dem lernschwächere Klassen das Passiv, das in Berichten wesentlich ist, üben können (They were beaten and kicked_the passive voice.doc). Die Übung kann auch Hausaufgabe sein.
