Slavery – America's Original Sin

M 1

Tasks

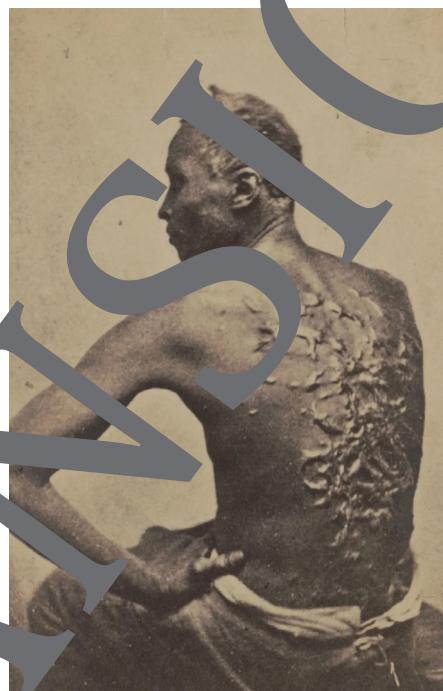

1. Look at the picture and read the text explaining its background. Then read the excerpt from the slave law below. Together with a partner, outline the legal argument in the slave code regarding the death of a slave following punishment by his "master". As what are slaves categorized in the argument and what are the consequences of this categorization for the question, whether killing a slave is a crime or not?
2. Apply the legal argument to the story of Gordon: How did it legally justify his brutal whipping? Discuss your results with the class.

Left: Gordon, or "Whipped Peter", an escaped slave, during a medical examination where he shows his scars from whipping while in slavery.

In the midst of the American Civil War (1861–65), Gordon fled from the plantation of his slaveholders John and Bridget Lyons. His flight took him 10 days over 40 miles, until he finally made it to a camp of Union soldiers in Baton Rouge. The Union represented the Northern States, who opposed slavery.

As he sat for the picture, Gordon reportedly said: "Overseer Artayou Carrier whipped me. I was two months in bed sore from the whipping. My master came after I was whipped; he discharged the overseer."

Excerpt from a slave law in Virginia (1669)

[...] if any slave resist his master [...] and by the extremity of the correction should chance to die¹, that his death shall not be accounted a felony², but the master [...] be acquitted³ from molestation⁴, since it cannot be presumed⁵ that premeditated malice⁶ (which alone makes murder a felony) should induce⁷ any master to employ his own slave to do it.⁸

“Separate but Equal” – The Doctrine of Segregation

M 6

Tasks

1. Count off 1 to 6 going down the row. Then watch the video on the famous court case “Plessy vs. Ferguson” and briefly answer the question corresponding to your number. Afterwards, report back to the class.
 - Question 1: What exactly happened to Homer Plessy in 1892 and what law did he allegedly break?
 - Question 2: What did the U.S. Supreme Court try to determine and how did it answer?
 - Question 3: How did Justice Brown interpret the 14th Amendment? (i. e. the change to the Constitution that guaranteed equal protection by the law to all citizens)
 - Question 4: According to Justice Brown, why was the Louisiana law of separate seating for black and for white people not racist?
 - Question 5: What did Justice Harlan mean by “Our Constitution is color-blind.”?
 - Question 6: How would you explain the phrase “separate but equal” in your own words?

2. Reflect on the argument made by the Supreme Court. Do you think it is in line with the constitution, especially with the Fourteenth Amendment? And more generally: Is it possible to reconcile¹ the concept of separation with the concept of equality, as the doctrine “separate but equal” claims? Discuss these questions with the class.
